Bush Avenue: For Irving T. Bush an investor in the Newburgh Shipyards and owner of Brooklyn's Bush Terminal, where Norton Lilly ships were berthed during WWI (see Norton Street).

Norton Street: For Skeffington S. Norton, a senior partner of the Norton Lilly Company, a major New York-based shipping concern, which bought an interest in the Newburgh Shipyards.

Lilly Street: For Joseph T. Lilly, a Norton Lilly senior partner.

Farrell Street: For John J. Farrell, another Norton Lilly senior partner.

McKinstry Street: For Dewitt E. McKinstry, Newburgh City Treasurer for many years.

Bennett Street: For Edwin C. Bennett, General Manager of the Newburgh Shipyards during WWI.

Wilson Street: For Dr. Henry Wilson, Newburgh City Manager during WWI.

Fullerton Avenue: In honor of one of the two prominent lawyers, Judge William Fullerton and Stephen W. Fullerton. Possibly for S. W. Fullerton who was a local Civil War officer who in later years (around 1890) had one of the two Newburgh posts of the Grand Army of the Republic named after him.

Prospect Street: For the view to the west; known originally as Stone Street.

Third Street: The “third” east-west street north of Broadway.

South Street: Original southern border street of “the Glebe”.
